The Tented Sun by Poetbroker

Sun rising from San Pedro docks to arc the blue Pacific.
Glance over the freighter's bow past Malibu to Downtown.

See smoggy dawn of Alameda Trucks
The tulips flying up Maple Clattering carts of garment cuts fill elevator towers of babble.

Sun shining on bubbling foam washing the waiting surfers Steal a glance past Broad Beach in your arc to Santa Barbara.

Make MTA tracks glisten past the broken lines of Ethnicities.
Throw tower shadows over eyes watching yellow birds in the sky

Cast your flash for gals and guys exploring the purple dusk
By blue tents of drugs and guns
In pools of vomit and blood.

The Old Bank District's museum-in-progress, Main Museum, launched its test site Beta Main with an ongoing 10-day event staged by Los Angeles artists Suzanne Lacy and Andrea Bowers. The opening featured talks and performance with music and a reception in Harlem Place just behind Spring Street Park. Coming up in the near future, museum director Allison Agsten will host a program of office hours for local artists to come speak with her one on one about their work. Be sure to stop by and see performances running daily 12-8pm through November 8th.

This past month, HCBID Homeless Outreach Coordinator Robert Newman has successfully initiated five Historic Core homeless individuals into the shelter process through voluntary 51.50 holds. Utilizing the "Stages of Change" model, Bob's repeated contacts with individuals helps him get to know them, their needs, and their readiness in order to determine eligibility for a multitude of services. In addition, his integrated model focuses on not only providing individuals with food, hygiene kits, clothes and blankets, but rather on connecting them with services that lead to treatment of underlying issues and a continuum of care. Congratulations and a big thank you to Bob for his tireless work and recent promising successes.

Sunday November 6th,

Nervous about the election? So are we. Celebrate (or commiserate) with sympathetic friends and a drink in hand at Ace's election night party in their 1,600 seat theater. The party and music starts at 4pm and runs until... well.. we'll just have to see...
